Our hero, a diligent young man by the name of Mark-Alem, has been drafted into Money Deals. For the record the leading themes of these stories, discounting the ramblings of the insane, were: picaresque imaginings of the lives of amputees; levitating housewives; talking cats or household pets, and; the first sexual exploits of post-war youth. In Mark-Alem's gray existence, life only flares up a moment before death. And apart from Mr. The next day there is retaliation.
