John Yoder, famous Mennonite pacifist theologian, answers the question posed to many pacifists: What would you do if a violent person tried to attack a loved one? It seems to me that, almost without exception, great people in history in and out of the church, are great but at such expense to other areas of life. These concerns have begun to revive the conscience of the church in new ways.

Weigert is now a professor of women and leadership, and assistant to the provost. Yoder explores the pros and cons of a nonviolent response to a violent person threatening to harm a loved one. Kasich's father was of Czech descent, while his mother was of Croatian descent.
