De Volder was so insistent a partisan of Descartes that on 18 June action was taken by the university authorities to stop his onslaughts against the Aristotelian philosophy Bronnen tot de Geschiedenis der Leidsche Universiteit. But, none the less, it was obvious that in practice wealth and luxury were companions; and the contradiction between the actual pursuit of this wealth and the current moral condemnation of the luxury it involved remained. Mandeville employed a humorously cynical downrightness of statement that made him so provocative that even now, after two hundred years, he has kept almost unimpaired his ability to irritate those who disagree with .
