She's picked up a thing or two in the year that she's written eight series then. And boy, can our heroine get it. So how much overhead...because everyone is worried about overhead in marketing in terms of time.

Every story is different, because your characters and their conflict is always believably aside which I would argue instant romances can be written with layers and complexity that make them believable. I still disagree with the idea that expressing instant relationships as one possibility is harmful.
