The expected gains from a move are the net difference between the expected wages in the country of arrival, the lower wages in the country of origin and the costs of migration. In a detailed telephone based survey, we collected data on migration biography, migration motive, living circumstances and social integration before and after the move, return intentions and socio-demographic variables. Liberal public opinion in the West condemned the atrocities committed by virtually all sides.

Regionalist narratives are always expected to be tributary to a broader national narrative. Fritschi published a review of school buildings constructed in Switzerland that year. In the immediate post-war period, a few regions were created, for instance, in Italy, but they did not have much practical implications.

They expected the German economic and financial elite to play ball, which, of these reforms was the implementation of mandatory schooling in that expanded and organised the public-school .
